

■ FFC/2005

*The 14th
Federal Forecasters Conference
April 21, 2005*

Capturing the Impact of International
Trends in Our Forecasts

Global market forces and other international developments have always shaped America's destiny. Thus, forward thinking public policy must recognize and anticipate both domestic and international trends in population migration, economic activity, technological advances, education, military developments, political changes, and other components of our interdependent world. The challenge for forecasters is to spot and adequately predict those trends that cross international boundaries in a manner that supports enlightened decision making in the United States. The 2005 Federal Forecasters Conference will engage this challenge by seeking to highlight how major international forces are identified and incorporated into projections and plans of importance to public policy.

Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) Conference and Training Center
2 Massachusetts Avenue, N.E.
Washington, DC

DATES TO REMEMBER

February 1, 2005	Abstract Submissions Deadline
February 1, 2005	Contest Entry Deadline
March 1, 2005	Conference Registration Deadline

~SPONSORING AGENCIES ~

Bureau of Health Professions • Bureau of Labor Statistics
Bureau of Transportation Statistics • Department of Veterans Affairs • Economic Research Service
Internal Revenue Service • International Trade Administration • National Center for Education Statistics
U.S. Census Bureau • U.S. Geological Survey • U.S. Postal Service

~ PARTNERING ORGANIZATION ~

Center for Economic Research, George Washington University

For registration forms and other information:
www.federalforecasters.org